Steve Troxler
Commissioner

In August, we hosted the 4th annual AgFIRST! symposium and I was very pleased with the program and turnout. Sometimes you get lucky when you start planning these events. The timeliness of this year's topics couldn't have been better.

The focus of this year's symposium was food safety, and we had asked Dr. David Acheson, an associate commissioner in the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, to be our guest speaker.

No one could have known that in the months leading up to the symposium, our country would experience a widespread salmonella outbreak and Dr. Acheson would be a central figure in trying to find its source.

I know many of you have heard me say it again and again, but food safety is critical to each one of us, and each of us has a role to play in ensuring a safe food supply.

Anywhere along the path from the field to the fork, food can become contaminated with bacteria or pathogens that can cause human illness.

As consumers, we all have to be careful when we handle and prepare food to be sure we don't accidentally create problems for ourselves.

We are very fortunate to have one of the safest food supplies in the world, but we must remain diligent in our efforts. We live in a global economy, which gives us access to foods from all over the world. In addition, food raised right here in our state goes to markets around the globe, and our trade partners expect high-quality food free

N.C. Mountain State Fair runs Sept. 5-14

The N.C. Mountain State Fair celebrates its 15th season and as implied by this year's theme, "Best in the West," there will be plenty of blue ribbon fun, family entertainment on tap Sept. 5-14.

Visitors can check out the livestock competitions, cheer on their favorite racing pig, see crafters creating one-of-a-kind works of art, look at the winning entries in the arts and crafts competitions, enjoy delicious food and spin around on Midway rides. And that's just for starters. Whether you're looking for fast-paced fun or low-key entertainment, the Mountain State Fair offers plenty to see and do.

New attractions for 2008 include:

- Cowboy mounted shooting demonstrations Sept. 12-14,

- Rusty's Trailblazing Chuckwagon show. A special Dutch oven cooking class will be held at 6:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday and at 3:30 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays.

- Bear Mountain Wildlife show, featuring bears performing circus-like tricks,

- IGX interactive game experience, which gives visitors a chance to play the latest video games from Nintendo Wii, Sony Playstation 3 and Microsoft Xbox, and

- An AgricaDabra magic show focused on eating healthy North Carolina agricultural foods.

Folks who enjoy the Farmer for a Day tent will find an expanded display this year Mountains provide a majestic backdrop to the Mountain State Fair Midway. In addition to thrilling rides, fairgoers can enjoy music, clogging, livestock shows, arts and craft exhibits and more.

featuring even more animals plus demonstrations of working border collies. It will be held Sept. 8-11, at 4 and 7 p.m. and Sept. 12-14, at 11 a.m., and 2, 5 and 8 p.m.

Antique tractor and farm equipment will be on display in the Heritage Area of the fairgrounds. The popular Mountain Music Competition will also be held in the Heritage Area Sept. 5-13 from 7-9 p.m.

On Sept. 9 at 6 p.m. the FFA Truck and Tractor Driving Contest will be held in the open ring near McGough Arena.

McGough Arena will host a great lineup of local and nationally recognized performers. The toe-tapping entertainment kicks off Sept. 5 from 5-7 p.m. and Sept. 6 from 6-9 p.m. with the Clogging Championship. The high-energy performances get many in the crowd on their feet and clapping their hands.

Admission is free.

On Sept. 9, up-and-coming Nashville star Chuck Wicks will perform his first hit single, “Stealing Cinderella,” and the follow-up, “All I Ever Wanted” off his debut album, “Starting Now.”

The Bellamy Brothers will perform Sept. 10. The duo has released more than 40 albums during a 30-year career and has recorded 14 number one hits, including the mega-hit, “If I Said You Had a Beautiful Body Would You Hold it Against Me.”

Sept. 11, the blended harmonies of the all-female Christian group Point of Grace will fill McGough Arena. Point of Grace has been nominated for two Grammys and is the winner of eight Gospel Music Association Dove awards.

Rhonda Vincent, the seven-time International Bluegrass Music Association’s Female Vocalist of the Year, will bring her electrifying and distinct sound on Sept. 14.

The cost for the Sept. 9, 10, 11 and 14 shows is $5 per person plus admission to the Fair. Shows start at 7:30 p.m. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. Seating is on a first-come, first-served basis.

Fairgoers can gain free admission and help a good cause on Ingles Day Sept. 10. Visitors who donate five cans of Laura Lynn brand foods from Ingles Supermarkets will receive free admission.

Other special promotions are:

- Student Free Admission Day on Sept. 5, where students in grades K-12 are admitted free until 6 p.m.,
- Armband Days Sept. 8 and Sept. 11, where visitors can ride from 4-11 p.m. for $15,
- Friday Night Stampede on Sept. 12 from 9 p.m. – 1 a.m., where admission and a ride armband are $15,
- Senior Day on Sept. 12, with free admission to seniors 65 and over.

Fairgoers will find plenty of free grounds entertainment at the Mountain State Fair, including a magic show by Agricadabra pictured above. Other grounds entertainment includes music by Leon Jacobs Jr., Rusty’s Trailblazing Chuckwagon display and show, the precision horseback riding and flag presentation of Dixie Startlight Express, pig races, a bear show and puppet shows.

Admission is $5 for adults and $2 for kids 6-12 and seniors 65 and older. For more on the Mountain State Fair go to www.mountainfair.org or call (828) 687-1414.

Improvements planned for WNC Ag Center, Farmers Market

The Mountain State Fair will look a little different next year, as two new buildings are planned for the grounds of the Western N.C. Agricultural Center in Fletcher.

A $3 million building will house arts and crafts during the fair, and will be available for rent the rest of the year for civic groups, churches, organizations, weddings and other events.

Construction of a livestock building costing $2.1 million is also scheduled. The building will increase the number of stalls available at the center.

“The additions we will be making will allow us to provide much needed space to expand existing livestock and horse events and draw new events that will bring more visitors from across the region,” Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler said.

Other improvements are planned for the center, including a $7.5 million renovation of Davis Arena so that it can accommodate a wider variety of events.

A construction timetable for that project is not ready yet, said Kent Yelverton, director of property and construction for the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

The WNC Farmers Market in Asheville also is slated for renovations, including new restrooms in truck sheds 2 and 4, new ventilation fans in retail buildings A and B, and new roofs for the retail buildings and Wholesale Building No. 1. In addition, the main drive of the market will be paved.

“I made improvements to our western facilities a priority with the General Assembly,” Troxler said. “Thanks to the support of our Western North Carolina legislators, in recent years we have been able to secure more than $15.1 million in funding to do much needed upgrades at these facilities and our Western Diagnostic Laboratory in Arden.”

A $700,000 renovation of the lab is already under way and should be completed this fall, Troxler said. It involves replacing HVAC ducts and chillers, renovating showers, and installing a new fire alarm and sprinklers.

of harmful pathogens.

Food safety efforts are proactive ways to help protect these important markets for farmers and agribusiness companies.

During the salmonella outbreak, I encouraged consumers to look for North Carolina-grown products, which had not been implicated in any way with the food safety issue. As consumers we have to be smart and make decisions based on common sense and reason.

If you know a farmer down the road grew jalapeno peppers and tomatoes and those commodities have not come in contact with produce from Mexico or another state or country that is being looked at as a possible source of an outbreak, then it is fairly safe to assume those vegetables would be OK to consume.

The idea of buying locally produced foods was also part of the AgFIRST! program. Gary Gay with our Food Distribution Division updated attendees about the Farm to School program, which is going strong this year. We are continuing to work with child nutrition directors across the state to get North Carolina fruits and vegetables on the school lunch lines. This is a great program and it benefits farmers, kids and the North Carolina economy.

As a department, we remain committed to food safety. Several of our divisions provide regulatory oversight on food safety, including Food and Drug Protection, Meat and Poultry Inspection, Veterinary, and Structural Pest Control and Pesticides.

But as discussed at the symposium, food safety efforts require a holistic approach and not just the efforts of the state or federal government. I am glad we were able to bring together so many of the partners in these efforts. The timing was perfect and I believe the symposium served to build better communication between the various partners.

You can read more about the symposium on page 12.

NCDA&CS Vet lab system earns full accreditation from AAVLD

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services’ veterinary diagnostic laboratory system has received full accreditation by the American Association of Veterinary Laboratory Diagnosticians (AAVLD), following a comprehensive on-site review earlier this summer.

Accreditation means the laboratories meet or exceed national standards of compliance, including testing, quality assurance, safety and record keeping.

Accreditation means the labs meet or exceed national standards of compliance.

The veterinary diagnostic laboratory system is composed of five laboratories located in Arden, Elkin, Monroe, Raleigh and Rose Hill. The labs are accredited to work on all species of animals and serve to protect the state’s livestock, poultry and companion animal health, as well as that of the general public.

“This accreditation is a testament to an intensive and concerted effort on behalf of our laboratory employees,” said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. “It is also important to recognize the General Assembly for its support in the past four years to increase funding to update equipment and buildings throughout the laboratory system.

“North Carolina’s livestock and poultry industries represent a $5 billion industry. Having a diagnostic laboratory system that is accredited gives us an additional weapon in protecting against foreign animal diseases. We know that our test results are highly accurate based on national standards for testing,” Troxler said.

Laboratory Director Dr. Karen Post said accreditation gives the laboratory system a formal recognition that will have a host of positive affects. Accreditation allows the state to meet foreign trade testing requirements, possibly opening up additional federal funding from the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s National Veterinary Service Laboratory, and allows the lab system to be used by those small-animal practitioners who are required to use an accredited laboratory.

N.C. State Fair offers something for everyone; runs Oct. 16-26

■ Concert and advance admission & ride tickets on sale at www.ncstatefair.org

The N.C. State Fair may be weeks away, but there’s already an excitement at the fairgrounds as preparations continue for the annual event. One reason for the flurry of activity is the Fair will open early for a Preview Day on Thursday, Oct. 16, giving fairgoers an additional evening of rides, food and games.

“The Fair is such a popular event for many North Carolinians that we felt an additional day is warranted to allow people as much time as possible to enjoy it,” said Wesley Wyatt, State Fair manager. Preview Day will also feature discounted gate admission and a wrist band for unlimited rides, which will cost $25 and will only be available on this date. Gates will open on Preview Day at 3 p.m., and the exhibit halls and Midway will open at 4 p.m.

The Fair is busy getting dust out of the air as well, as finishing touches are being placed on several construction projects. The parking lot between Dorton Arena and the Sam Rand Grandstand is being refinished with new amenities. A seating area will provide space for visitors to relax while eating their favorite foods, and new electrical boxes and water line hook-ups were put in as well.

The grounds entertainment lineup has been finalized, with some favorites returning and some new faces added. The Circle C Racing Pigs will be back on the Hogway Speedway near Gate 9, and Smithfield the Painting Pig will wow the crowds in front of the Exposition Center. The King Action Sports Stunt Show will be in the grandstand, marking the 10th year since Keith King and friends first made an appearance at the State Fair.

This year, a motorcross jumper will join the BMX stunt show. The tractor pull and demolition derby will also take place in the grandstand.

It’s been several years, but he’s been missed, so Rock-it the Robot is making a comeback at the Fair. This 9-foot-tall robot may look intimidating, but he steals hearts wherever he goes on the fairgrounds. At that height, he won’t have to look up to see Carrie McQueen, the stilt walker, when they pass each other on the grounds.

Oscar the Robot will also be making the rounds to interact with fairgoers. Oscar is no stranger to the N.C. State Fair, either, and will be roaming around Kiddieland. Other acts in Kiddieland include Michelle’s Magical Poodles, Magic 4 U, Hubba Bubba the Clown and Washboard Willy.

The Statue Viva rounds out the grounds entertainment.

The Wells Family Band will perform on the Waterfall Stage, along with several beach music groups. The Kenny and Amanda Smith Band will be on the Bluegrass Stage in Heritage Circle daily.

Nightly entertainment in Dorton Arena will keep things rocking, rolling and cooking. Lineup highlights include celebrity chef Bobby Flay, country music stars Montgomery Gentry, Joe Nichols, Josh Turner and Jason Aldean, and Christian music star Toby Mac. Visitors get two shows for the price of one when the up-and-coming group Lady Antebellum is joined by former Trick Pony lead singer Heidi Newfield. Check out the State Fair Web site for a complete schedule.

The State Fair will be going green this year with its exhibit Green NC. This exhibit will introduce fairgoers to easy and economical ways to help save the environment, as well as introduce future technologies. The fairgrounds will be also expand its recycling program to include bottles and cans.

Green NC is sponsored by Duke Energy and the North Carolina State Energy Office.

Fairgoers can save time and money by buying their tickets in advance.

Advance tickets are on sale online at www.ncstatefair.org. Adult admission is $5 in advance are kids ages 6-12 are $1. A book of 18 ride tickets are $10 in advance compared to $18 at the Fair.

Starting Oct. 2 and running through Oct. 16, tickets will be available for walk-up purchase at the N.C. State Fairgrounds, the Agriculture Building in downtown Raleigh, the State Farmers Market, Triangle Town Center in Raleigh, Burlington Square Mall in Burlington, Wilson Mall in Wilson, Northgate Mall in Durham, The Streets at Southpoint in Durham and Four Seasons Town Centre in Greensboro. All locations will accept cash, debit and credit cards. The convenience fee does not apply at walk-up locations.

The N.C. State Fair will be held at the N.C. State Fairgrounds Oct. 16-26. For more information and to buy tickets, go to www.ncstatefair.org.

Century Farm Family Reunion to be held Oct. 23 at State Fair

A reunion of the state’s Century Farm Family members will be held Thursday, Oct. 23, at the State Fairgrounds. Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. and the program starts at 9:30 a.m.

The program recognizes farms that have been in continuous family ownership for 100 years or more. To be included, a family must submit an application outlining the history of family ownership.

The Century Farm program started in 1970 and there are about 1,600 North Carolina farms in the program.

Century Farm applications can be obtained online at www.ncagr.gov/paffairs/century/application.htm or by calling the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services Public Affairs Division at (919) 733-4216.

Ownership can be determined from an abstract from a title or original records such as the original deed or land patents. In some cases, other authentic land records are acceptable.

Century Farm Family reunions are held every three years during the N.C. State Fair.

For more, go to www.ncagr.gov/paffairs/century/index.htm or call (919) 733-4216.

NCDA&CS AgFIRST! event draws more than 300 to Raleigh

Ensuring the safety of North Carolina’s food supply requires teamwork across the board, Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler said at the fourth annual AgFIRST! symposium in August.

Speaking to more than 300 farmers, food processors and retailers and government officials at the State Fairgrounds in Raleigh, Troxler said incidents such as the salmonella outbreak that has sickened 1,400 people in 43 states demonstrate the need for cooperation.

“We have seen recently just how much of an impact a contaminated product can have when it enters the food chain,” Troxler said. “Not only can it cause serious health issues, but it can destroy consumer confidence.”

U.S. tomato growers lost an estimated $200 million after the U.S. Food and Drug Administration warned consumers that eating certain kinds of tomatoes could carry the risk of becoming ill with salmonella poisoning, he said.

“We’ve got to have a plan to ensure that growers and food companies can return to business,” Troxler said. Without it, domestic food production will continue to drop and the United States will become more dependent on foreign countries for food, something Troxler said he does not want to see happen.

Food safety begins on the farm, with safe production practices, he said. Packers and shippers must handle food properly.

Grocery stores and restaurants must also handle and prepare food responsibly. Even consumers must do their part by taking proper care when handling and preparing food at home.

Government agencies, particularly at the state and local levels, need the resources to prevent tainted foods from entering the market, Troxler said.

Other speakers included Dr. David Acheson, the FDA’s associate commissioner for foods. Acheson said the agency’s plan for food protection focuses on prevention, intervention and response.

The FDA wants to prevent foodborne contamination by promoting increased corporate responsibility; identifying food vulnerabilities and assessing risks; and expanding the understanding and use of effective risk-reduction measures, Acheson said.

Intervention focuses on risk-based inspections and sampling within the food chain, and improving detection of problems.

FDA also wants to respond to events more quickly and efficiently, and increase communication with other federal, state and local agencies, Acheson said.

Above, U.S. congressman Walter Jones talks to attendees at the AgFIRST! Symposium hosted by the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

At right, Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler discusses food safety issues with U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Dole. Dole was also a guest speaker at the annual event.

This year’s focus was on food safety through the entire food chain, and the event drew farmers, food processors and retailers, and government officials.

Troxler encourages farmers to have corn tested for aflatoxin

Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler is encouraging farmers to have their corn tested for aflatoxin to prevent contamination of feeds and food.

Aflatoxin is a byproduct of the mold Aspergillus flavus. It can be harmful to both humans and livestock. “Aflatoxin can cause a lot of problems, so it’s worth a farmer’s time and effort to submit corn samples to the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services for testing,” Troxler said.

Tests are free to farmers and will be conducted at the Constable Laboratory, 4000 Reedy Creek Road in Raleigh. Farmers who are unable to deliver the required 5- to 10-pound sample of shelled corn to the lab may take samples to one of the following agricultural research stations:

- Border Belt Tobacco Research Station, 86 Border Belt Drive, Whiteville, (910) 648-4703; Ty Marshall, superintendent.
- Peanut Belt Tobacco Research Station, 112 Research Station Lane, Lewiston-Woodville, (252) 348-2213; Tommy Corbett, superintendent. Station contact: Margaret Pierce.
- Tidewater Research Station, 207 Research Station Road, Plymouth, (252) 793-4118; Jewell Tetterton, superintendent.
- Lower Coastal Plain Tobacco/Cunningham Research Station, 200 Cunningham Road, Kinston, (252) 527-3579; Phillip Winslow, superintendent.
- Piedmont Research Station, 8350 Sherrills Ford Road, Salisbury, (704) 278-2624; Joe K. Hampton, superintendent.
- Mountain Horticultural Crops Research Station, 74 Research Drive, Fletcher, (828) 684-7197; Denny Thompson, superintendent.

Samples may be mailed directly to the lab at the following address:

N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services
Food and Drug Protection Division
1070 Mail Service Center
Raleigh, NC 27699-1070

Forms and bags needed for submitting samples will be available at collection sites. For additional information about the aflatoxin testing program, contact Jennifer Godwin or Michelle Gilliam at the NCDA&CS Food and Drug Protection Division, (919) 733-7366.

Agrotips — September 2008

- Don't fertilize grass during drought.*
Fall is usually the time to fertilize cool-season grasses, including hay and pasture crops. However, the NCDA&CS Agronomic Division recommends delaying fertilization if drought conditions persist in your area. Rain does not necessarily mean the drought is over. Visit www.ncdrought.org to keep up with the drought status for your area.
- Moisture is needed for grasses, like fescue and orchardgrass, to begin fall growth. Without moisture, fertilizer application is likely to be a waste of time and money. In the case of forage grasses, it could also be dangerous. High levels of nitrates can be fatal to cattle.
- Focus on strawberry fertility.*
Take soil samples and apply any recommended lime as soon as possible. Generally, strawberries need 100–120 pounds of nitrogen per acre per season. Prior to building the beds and laying plastic, apply 30–60 pounds of nitrogen along with any phosphorus or potassium recommended on the soil report. Even when soils are high in phosphorus, an application of 30 pounds can be beneficial.
- Check for nematode problems during crop harvest.*
Plant-parasitic nematodes are common in all field crop soils and often lower yields without being apparent. Fall is an excellent time to find out if nematode populations are high and, if so, to develop a plan to manage them. When the weather is good for harvest, it is also good for collecting soil samples for nematode assay.
- Nematode populations peak at the end of the growing season so samples assayed now provide a good description of potential hazards. Sampling now also allows time to plan a management strategy.
- If you noticed localized areas of poor growth during the growing season, it is a good idea to collect separate soil samples from good and poor areas. Submit two samples from each of these areas—one for nematode assay and one for soil fertility. Comparison of results from good and poor areas and from nematode assays and soil tests is helpful in pinpointing a problem.
